

【Shenzhen】Jinpi Fang Art District Brewing and capturing nostalgia!

Formerly a renowned brewery and the first brewery in Shenzhen, Jinpi Fang Art District is a 14,000 square metre creative park that combines family fun, art, trends and photography. In addition to its distinctive architectural features, it also offers a rich array of art and cultural exhibitions.

The former cylindrical factory buildings have now been become venues for art and cultural exhibitions, events and bazaars. It retains its original industrial architecture, with weathered walls and towering chimneys telling stories of the past. After renovation, the area is divided into several major zones, each with its own setting, such as the Starbucks lookout tower, a 3D maze, a giant birdcage, and a fermentation tank warehouse.

Originally a water tower, the Starbucks lookout tower has four themed levels featuring intertwined industrial pipes, making it a popular photo spot for influencers. The 3D maze is built with exposed concrete walls and rusted staircases, offering an immersive exploration experience of industrial ruins. The giant birdcage features white and green checkered tiles on the exterior wall, with industrial birdcage decorations under the ceiling creating an artistic atmosphere. The fermentation tank warehouse area has 33 giant tanks with excellent lighting effects. Shooting upwards beneath them offers a stunning photo angle. Meanwhile, the interior staircase is also a popular photo spot, while the first floor preserves the punk-style depot with pipes.

Many creative studios, art galleries, cafés and themed restaurants are located along the streets. Strolling through the district, visitors can appreciate the creative artworks and “hunt for treasures” in trendy shops. For photo lovers, the unique industrial-style setting makes it a perfect destination for taking pictures.
